Aamir khan mela film

Megastar Aamir Khan's brother Faizal Khan made a splash in Bollywood with the film Mela back in 2000. Although Faizal has long been associated in the film industry, having been assistant director to Jo Jeete Wohi Sikandar and Tum Mere Ho, Faizal could not have the same influence as his older brother with an audience as an actor. Back in business as a producer after a long vacation, Faizal Khan opened up about his journey in the film industry. Rumor has it that the actor is actually dealing with mental illness that forced him to leave the film industry. Faizal settled these rumors in 2015 when he starred in a film called Chinar Daastaan-E-Ishq starring him. While promoting the film, Faizal stated that rumors that he was labeled a mentally ill person don't really hold any real facts because it would be impossible for a mentally ill person to work in movies. Faizal believed that none of his family members, including brother Aamir Khan, would be able to understand his situation and therefore never sought any guidance or opportunity to reboot the films. Faizal stated that he has been close to Aamir over the years and is evaluating scripts to decide whether Aamir Khan's production company should take over the film or not. Currently, Faizal Khan is executive producer for Aamir Khan's next film, Laal Singh Chaddha. Also read: How did Aamir Khan's daughter Ira fare as a director? It stars Aamir Khan, his real-life brother Faisal Khan,[2] and Twinkle Khanna. [3]. This was one of the biggest box office failures of 2000. Plot The only soldier brother (Ayub Khan) of a young woman, Roopa (Twinkle Khanna), returns to the village of Chandanpur to arrange her marriage. The festival is decorated in the happiness of Root's marriage, however Chandanpur's fortunes are short-lived, as the village is looted by a group of terrorists. The terrorist leader, Gujjar, (Tina Verma), kills a visiting politician, and to make matters worse, Root's beauty catches Gujjar's eyes. However, as Gujjar tries to make off with a terrified Roop, her brother comes to her aid, only to be killed, to the dismay of the village, especially Roope. Also killed was her best friend, Gopal (teacher Om Kapoor), much to the dismay of Gopal's mother (Tanvi Azmi) who tried to stop her son from saving Roopa (because of his young age) which is why Gujjar killed him. Roopa, outraged by the fact that her brother and Gopal are gone, vows revenge. Gujjar threatens Roopi that she will only be his mistress and that she will never be able to have a brother or a lover. Furious, Roopa tries to commit suicide by jumping into a waterfall because she feels it's better to kill herself rather than be a mistress. Destiny has other plans as Roopa survives and steals the clothes of Kishan (Aamir Khan), a stage actor. Kishan works with his best friend, the truck driver, Shankar (Faisal Khan). When Kishan first meets Roopa, he is captivated by her beauty and falls in love with her. Kishan decides to make Roopa the heroine of their dance show, however, Shankar warns him that Roopa will get them in trouble. With no option, Roopa travels with them, and tries to escape, but returns when he is chased by a gang and a drunk trying to rape her. However, Roopa is rescued by Shankar and Kishan. Roopa plays love for Kishan, who wants to marry her, and the two agree to help her return to Chandanpur. When Kishan would marry Roopa, who feels guilty about her betrayal, she led, told them her story, Shankar becomes her brother, while Kishan, heartbroken, leaves in disgust. Roopa and Shankar return to Chandanpur, where Shankar mobilizes the village, trying to set a trap for Gujjar who learned of Roop's survival and terrorizes the village to find out where he is. The trap backfires horribly until Kishan returns with suspended officer Pakkad Singh (Johnny Lever). The trap was reinstated with another carnival and villain attack as planned. Roopa is kidnapped, and Kishan and Shankar chase and are captured and taken to Gujjar's hideout where they are forced, he and his men. At the end of the arrival of Chandanpur villagers, well prevailed and terrorists met a bloody end. Roopa is reunited with her brother Shankar and lover Kishan. Eventually Kishan and Roopa get married and as they drive their truck, Shankar happens to meet Champakali (Aishwarya Rai) and Kishan and Roopa watch them. Also offered the lead role was Sonala Bendre and Raveena Tandon. However, due to a lack of dates, both actresses could not be part of the film. The role ultimately went to Twinkle Khanna. Darshan said in an interview that the 1971 film Caravan had been released in 1981. Aditya Pancholi was signed to the role of villain, but switched off because he didn't want to be bare-chested throughout the film. [6] The soundtrack, Aamir Khan, approached and convinced A. R. Rahman to compose music for the film, but due to time constraints, Rahman turned down the offer. [7] The music was then composed by 4 composers, with songs composed by Ana Malik, Rajesh Roshan and Leslie Lewis, and Surinder Sodhi composing a film score. The placements of songs in this film have been fiercely criticized, especially the overuse of the title song 'Mela Dilon Ka'. The lyrics were also perceived as inappropriate because they were paradoxical and contradictory in nature. [8] Reception In her review for Rediff.com, Sharmila Taliculam called Aamir Khan the saving grace of the film and the only one who does complete justice to his role. Her film was a mix of Seven Samurai, Caravan and Sholay and she praised Tinu Verma's performance, which marked his portrayal of the villain as convincingly menacing. She noted that synchronisation of Khanna's voice is a gamble that ... withheld and [added] unnecessary drama and aggression to her role. [9] And his 3-star review, Sify praised the performances of Aamir Khan and Tina Verma and noted that Khanna tried very hard emotionally as she shed tears. [10] References ^ a b Mela.
